

Institute of Management Accountants Nation's Capital Chapter November 19, 2008

Kris Johnson

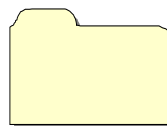

Management Consultant

We are pleased to announce the upcoming technical dinner meeting of the Institute of Management Accountants' Nation's Capital Chapter. Kris Johnson is a consultant providing leadership and teambuilding advice to organizations in the DC area.

Ms. Johnson practices Group Relations – a field that draws from sociology, psychoanalysis, social science, and anthropology to enhance organizational effectiveness. Group Relations theories were first used to successfully improve the performance of the British military during WWI and are currently very popular in Europe and Australia. Ms. Johnson has over 10 years of management consulting and financial audit experience primarily with the Big 4 firms. She integrates degrees in accounting, journalism, and advanced psychology.

The technical discussion this month will focus on how Group Relations perspectives can help us work together in today's business and financial environment.

The meeting is bound to offer new insights and we look forward to an opportunity for questions and discussion.

Last month, Virginia Senator Chap Peterson provided an insightful discussion about the history of transportation and particularly road construction and support within the state. A comprehensive view of rail, bus, auto, and non-motorized transportation and their benefits for Virginians were discussed, plus the needed funding means. We extend our gratitude to Senator Peterson for a great presentation.
